THE GARRISON CASE

Still in the Hands of the Jury and Generally

A DISAGREEMENT IS EXPECTED.

The Interest in the Probable Verdict Very General—The Jury at Variance on the Meaning of Certain Simple Words—Left to Its Own Resources to Find a Definition.

A full day was put in by the Garrison jury yesterday, and when evening arrived no progress had been made in their deliberations. The court room was crowded during the day, but the interest was all centered in the Probascio trial.

Dr. Garrison remained in the court room all day, waiting for the verdict. The jury in the present case seems to labor under a difficulty not experienced by the last. That jury seemed to know what a hostile demonstration was, to judge from a question it asked the court, but the present twelve intelligent men are at a loss for a definition of the word.

During the morning word was sent to the court, that the jury would like to know what a "hostile demonstration" or an "overt act" was. They were given no satisfaction, and in the afternoon they sent in a written request for an answering a difference of opinion existed in the jury regarding the meaning of the words.

Judge Paull could not see that he was able to answer the jury, as it was supposed to know, after hearing the testimony, what the words meant. One of the attorneys suggested that a Webster's dictionary be sent into the jury room. It was thought the jury might be disposed to think a technical meaning was concealed behind the simple words that puzzled them, but after searching through the law books counsel could find no record of a similar request ever having been made by a jury. That body was left to its own resources to evolve a definition.

When court adjourned at half-past five o'clock, the jury had not reached a verdict, and was dismissed for the night.

WHAT WILL THE VERDICT BE?

The longer the jury remains out, the more the opinion seems to grow among the public that it will be unable to agree, and the question is asked: If the jury disagrees on the definition of simple English words, how can it agree to take one view of the testimony? No body pretends, as on the last trial, to read from the actions of the jurymen a prediction of the result. None of them betrayed his sympathies for either side by nods or other motions, all but listened to the evidence with interest, without betraying any feeling in the matter.

The interest in the probable verdict is intense, and the general question on the streets yesterday was, "Has the jury come in yet?" The Garrison and the Probascio juries both slept at the Stamm House last night under the charge of four deputies. The first occupied the regular jury room upstairs and the Probascio jury slept in the back parlor on cots.

HE WOULDN'T CONFESS.

And the Charge of Selling on Sunday was Dismissed.

In police court yesterday William Bowman, the man who was rescued from Officer O'Brien by his friends Saturday afternoon, and on Monday gave himself up to Lieutenant Gaus, was fined $5 and costs by Mayor Seabright for abusing his wife. E. G. Davis being unable to pay his fine of $3 and costs for being disorderly in Porter's saloon on the South Side, went to the workhouse for fifteen days.

Michael Knight, up for being drunk, tried to bribe the mayor, by offering to pay ten dollars on his account at his honor's tailor shop. He was fined $1 and costs and was ordered to the hill, as he had not the wherewithal.

John Fendt was up for selling liquor on Sunday. He had promised Officer Sealy to come to court, and thinking he was going to confess the officer summoned no witnesses. Fendt refused to be the prosecuting witness against himself, and his honor dismissed the case. Charles Benter and John G. Kline confessed to the charge of selling on Sunday, and were fined $20 and costs each.

This unanimity of the G. A. R. in patronizing THE HUB is the result of an investigation as to the relative merits of the offerings of the various clothing houses of this city. Experts who have examined the goods and prices have rendered the verdict in favor of THE HUB, whose goods were found the best in the market, every suit being Strictly All-Wool, Fast Color and of precise G. A. R. Regulation, while the prices were positively 15 to 25 per cent lower than the same qualities are sold elsewhere. The various G. A. R. Posts, also S. of V. Camps, individually or collectively, will therefore find it to their interest to buy new uniforms, white vests, etc.
